2	One of the first initiatives of the beef quality assurance program was to minimize the occurrence of injection site lesions and to ensure that lesions do not occur in high value cuts. Injection site lesions are hardened scar tissue knots or abscesses in the muscle of animals caused by injections of medications. The two main management protocols to accomplish these goals are to ensure that all injections are given in the	Beef Quality Assurance Program minimize injection site lesions <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Give all injections in the region</li> <li>• Administer injections whenever possible according to label directions</li> </ul>
